Coffee with Cops

The Dallas Police Department will host “Coffee with Cops” events at participating McDonald’s locations throughout Dallas on Friday, March 7, 2014, from 7:00am to 9:00am.

Coffee with Cops is a community engagement opportunity for residents to interact with officers working in their neighborhood. The Dallas Police Department will have Deputy Chiefs and Neighborhood Patrol Officers on hand to answer any questions residents may have related to law enforcement.

“We thank McDonald’s for their continued support of our department’s community engagement initiatives,” said Dallas Police Chief David Brown. “Coffee with Cops further enhances the relationship between the Dallas Police Department and local residents,” said Brown. Such events provide an opportunity for informal and small scale interaction between the community and law enforcement, furthering Chief of Police David Brown’s community policing initiative.

The Dallas Police Department invites all residents to attend one of the participating McDonald’s locations for the upcoming “Coffee with Cops” to meet with officers and receive a free cup of hot/iced coffee. Residents are encouraged to join the conversation online using the #DPDCoffeewithCops.
