Chief David O. Brown Discipline Officer

Dallas Police Chief David O. Brown disciplined the following officer during a hearing this afternoon.

An Internal Affairs investigation concluded that Police Officer Marcus Maxwell, #8936, procured appointment with the Dallas Police Department by the omission of facts concerning his criminal history. The investigation also concluded that when questioned, Officer Maxwell gave inconsistent, conflicting and/or misleading statements regarding his conduct in an incident which occurred in February 2003.

During two separate investigations, Internal Affairs concluded that on two separate occasions, March 3, 2015 and June 25, 2015, Officer Maxwell failed to immediately clear upon completion of a call and that he was sleeping and/or loafing while on duty.

Officer Maxwell was terminated for his actions. He was hired in September 2006 and was assigned to the South Central Division.

Under civil service rules, Officer Maxwell has the right to appeal his discipline.
